

North Carolina Post Office Catalog Index

By Rich Weiner

This document is designed by the North Carolina Postal History Society (NCPHS) to be used in conjunction with its North Carolina Postmark Catalog (NCPC) to facilitate location of North Carolina postmarks associated with specific towns and counties. With this cross-reference aid, the user can access the correct county PDF file(s) within the NCPC to locate all known postmarks from a given town, in addition to a chronological listing of all the town's postmasters.

The following list provides further information on the use of this index:

1. Inactive post offices: A majority of post offices listed in the NCPC are no longer active, often with mail shifted to a different town located nearby (in which case, the name of that town is provided). This index lists both town names separately in alphabetical order. In some cases, the original town name becomes a branch office or substation of the assigned town. In these situations, this index separately lists both the original town name and the identically named branch or substation, using a convention by which the town entry is listed twice, e.g., both "East Durham" and "East Durham (Durham)," since the NCPC will contain postmarks for "East Durham" as both a free-standing town and as a station under "Durham."

2. Post offices with substation or branch offices: The NCPC includes known postmarks from all of a town's substations and branch offices, the great majority of which include both the substation or branch name and the town name. Uncommonly, only the substation or branch name is present in the postmark, making it unclear as to in which town the branch resides. In these cases (and only in these cases), substations and branch names are listed in an indented fashion under the town name, as well as separately within the index in alphabetical order, with the branch name followed by the name of the parent town in parentheses, e.g., "Henry River (Hickory Tavern)" where "Henry River" only appears as a Branch office of "Hickory Tavern" in the Catawba County PDF and is not listed separately in that county.

3. Post offices with name changes: Name changes occurred for many North Carolina Post Office names, e.g., dropping the terminal "h" for towns ending in "burgh" and dropping the suffix "C.H." (court house). The NCPC notes the date of all known town name changes within the postmaster list. In the present index, all such name changes are added as indented entries under the primary town entry. In situations where the new name is significantly different from an alphabetical perspective, e.g., "Stickridge" to "Eastland," this index also separately lists the changed name.

4. Town names associated with more than one county: These events occur for two possible reasons.

- A. Most commonly, where the formation of a new county leads to a different county designation for a town, all subsequent postmarks from that town, as well as subsequent postmaster names, are listed in the new NCPC county PDF, with earlier postmarks and postmasters remaining listed in the originating county PDF.
- B. Less common occurrences happen where more than one town with the same name are/were located within the same county. In such cases, the index town listings for the two identically named towns are followed by either a "(1)" or a "(2)," e.g., "Carbonton (1)" and "Carbonton (2)."

5. Towns with an extremely large number of postmarks, i.e., Asheville, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Raleigh, and Wilmington: Because certain post offices have such a large number of postmarks, separate PDF files for these are included in the NCPC and the postmark information does not appear in the county of that post office. In order to make it clear to users which branch or station offices for these towns are present in these single-post office PDF's (as opposed to the parent county PDF), this index uses a format by which users are directed to the correct PDF, e.g., "Charlotte (Mecklenburg)" instead of either "Charlotte" or "Mecklenburg" alone.
